

Transforming Healthcare in Indonesia: Key Changes in the New Health Law

Issue 22, December 2023

When the Indonesian government introduced Law No. 17 of 2023 on Health earlier this year, there were high hopes that it would streamline existing healthcare provisions, making them more comprehensible to the public, while significantly amending the healthcare sector.

Our latest Advisory highlights key aspects of these developments, providing essential insights for understanding the new legal framework. It also sheds light on the first implementing regulation of the new law, serving as the initial step in operationalizing its provisions.

Understanding these changes is vital for businesses in Indonesia's healthcare sector, ensuring compliance and readiness for upcoming regulations.
